Constituent Assembly

A constitution is a set of fundamental principles or established precedents that constitute the legal basis of a polity, organization, or other type of entity. It outlines the powers and duties of the government and guarantees certain rights to the people. Constitutions can be written or unwritten. A written constitution is a formal document that outlines the structure and functions of the government. An unwritten constitution is a set of laws, customs, and traditions that have evolved over time.

Roles and Functions of a Constitution

1. To provide a set of basic rules that allow for minimal coordination amongst members of a society.
2. To specify who has the power to make decisions in a society. It decides how the government will be constituted.
3. To set some limits on what a government can impose on its citizens. These limits are fundamental in the sense that government may never trespass them.
4. To enable the government to fulfil the aspirations of a society and create conditions for a just society.
5. To define identity (political and moral) of a person by defining and agreeing to basic norms and principles.
